

November Meeting

The November meeting was the annual “Bowling for Board Members” gathering at Flaherty’s Arden Hills Bowl. As usual, I forgot to take pictures, and this time no one posted any either. I went to Flaherty’s web site, but I couldn’t copy photos off it. So you will have to remember what it was like.

After the bowlers showed a wide range of skill levels, from pretty good to less good, we moved into the dining room for dinner. At meeting time, we squeezed into a corner where it was a little quieter, and elected a new slate of Board Members for 2019. Some existing members were generous enough to re-up for another year, and some new members were added to the board. Thank you to all of you!

Vader Combo

The only thing worse than wearing a face shield is not wearing one and getting hit by a chunk of debris or splashed with something toxic or nasty. Brass Knuckle's Vader Combo is a pair of goggles attached to a face shield. Smaller and lighter than traditional face shields, its close fit makes it hard for debris to come in from the sides or bottom. The goggles are vented and have an anti-fog coating to prevent condensation from obscuring your view. The Vader Combo has been out for a few months and sells for $13-14. A version with smoked lenses, for use in bright sunlight, will come out early next year.

Rapidrill

The Rapidrill is an accessory that allows a corded or cordless drill to be used in place of a magnetic drill. It's an adjustable frame that resembles a large f-clamp. The drill of your choice can be attached to one end while the other is used to back the beam, pipe, or angle being drilled. A lever and gears provide pressure while drilling—pushing the bit into the work with far less effort than drilling by hand. If you've ever drilled metal overhead or made multiple holes in thick metal with a hand-held drill you'll know why this is a cool product.

There are two versions of the device. The $1,200 industrial model (Rapidrill Pro) is not any cheaper than a cordless mag drill, though I am told by the manufacturer it will fit places a mag drill will not, and work on material that won't hold a heavy machine. The commercial model (Rapidrill Slim) is smaller and less capable than the industrial version, but at $399, a far more affordable option.

Note from the editor:

Thank You!

I am glad I had the opportunity to edit this newsletter for the past two years. I have enjoyed the challenge of finding things to write about. I especially appreciate the kind comments I have received. I am certain Andrew will do an excellent job, and that you all will be as helpful and supportive to him as you have to me.
